

---

A Royal Education

---

The focus of education for the nobility was never academics. They were expected to be leaders; the goals of honor, virtue and taste were as important as book learning. They spent much of their education on athletic and artistic pursuits. Today, these are “extracurricular” activities. Most adults will tell you that their most valuable lessons were learned and strongest friendships were forged while pursuing extracurricular activities.

What athletic activities interest you?

---

---

What artistic activities interest you?

---

---

---